Interpretation Boundaries

- Event data describes recorded actions rather than continuous optical-tracking positions.
- Project-defined indicators such as territory and progressive actions should be interpreted according to their stated methodology.
- Comparison results should be interpreted in tactical and positional context rather than as absolute player or team quality rankings.
- Territory-map zone percentages are shares of each team's located match events; the average-position marker is the mean recorded event location, not continuous spatial control or player-tracking occupancy.
